RIGHTS AND REPRODUCTIONS IN THE
ART BRANCH LIBRARY

REBECCA K. FRIEDMAN, ARLIS/NA-VRA ANNUAL CONFERENCE, 3/9/16
WHEN NEEDED, THESE PUBLIC COMPUTERS MAY BE USED FOR ONE-ON-ONE RESEARCH APPOINTMENTS.

THANK YOU,
MARQUAND LIBRARIANS
MARQUAND LIBRARY OF ART & ARCHAEOLOGY, PRINCETON UNIVERSITY
Publication & Broadcast Requests

The library requires a formal request for the reproduction or broadcast of materials housed in the Department of Rare Books and Special Collections. To submit a request, please use the Publication & Broadcast Form.

For purposes of pricing, the Princeton University Library draws a distinction between non-commercial and commercial or high-volume use.

NON-COMMERCIAL USE

There are no fees for non-commercial use, including academic and university press monographs with a print run less than 10,000 (with the exception of dust jacket or cover illustrations), scholarly journals, and exhibition catalogs and similar works published by libraries, museums, and non-profit organizations. There are no fees for Princeton University faculty, staff, and students: Princeton University Press, Princeton Alumni Weekly (PAW), Princeton University Art Museum, and the Index of Christian Art; or for other Princeton University departments, programs, offices, and publications.

COMMERCIAL AND HIGH-VOLUME USE

Commercial or high-volume use includes (but is not limited to) academic and university press monographs with a print run greater than 10,000; for-profit publications (either printed or electronic); textbooks, trade books, reference books, supplemental course readers, and curriculum materials.
Welcome

Copyright affects everything scholars do. This site offers multiple resources to help you understand what you can and can’t do.

Copyright Defined:

Copyright is the legal framework for ownership of written works, paintings, sculptures, photographs, videos, recorded music, sheet music, computer programs, video games, architectural design, choreography, etc. “Copyright” is one name for a bundle of rights: the right to make copies, distribute copies, make derivative works (such as a translation or adaptation), and the public performance and/or public display of works.

This website is a joint effort of the Princeton University Library, The McGraw Center for Teaching & Learning, and the Office of the General Counsel, and is intended to support the University's mission of excellence in teaching and research. The site materials developed in consultation with the Art Museum, the department of Art & Archeology and others.

Copyright rights, unregulated uses, and fair use

From the blog of Erik J. Heels, a drawing explaining copyright law.
About

Princeton Online is the home for open courses offered through Princeton University’s initiative in online education. Within this initiative, Princeton faculty members are enhancing the quality of education on campus while sharing their course materials with learners from around the world through our online learning platform providers Coursera, edX, Kadenze and NovoEd. Princeton’s free non-credit courses have allowed millions of students to learn in a wide range of academic disciplines through a variety of interactive formats, and some of them run concurrently with the on-campus courses upon which they are based. For more information about enrollment in these courses, please visit our FAQs.

Princeton’s online initiative is located in the McGraw Center for Teaching and Learning as part of the Center’s mission of promoting educational excellence. The McGraw Center supports faculty members in all aspects of creating online courses and connecting them to structured classroom activities that engage their students in interactive learning experiences. More information about this initiative and resources for faculty interested in online teaching are located on the McGraw Center’s website.
Rare book blog: at http://library.princeton.edu/marquand
Rebecca K. Friedman
Assistant Librarian
Marquand Library
rfriedma@princeton.edu
marquand@princeton.edu

Princeton University Library http://library.princeton.edu/
Marquand Library http://library.princeton.edu/marquand
Marquand rare books browse: http://library.princeton.edu/marquand/resources/rare-books
Princeton Online (MOOCs): https://online.princeton.edu/about Copyright at Princeton: http://www.princeton.edu/copyright/